18 Hunters Fined Here

West Virginian Draws $50 Penalty

Nine more hunters faced charges Thursday afternoon and one hunter appeared Friday morning in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root.

Root disposed of eight cases Thursday morning, on opening day of the hunting season, bringing the total so far to 18 cases.

Heaviest fine was levied against a West Virginia man who was charged with hunting without a non-resident license.

He was Ben K. Humphrey, 34, of Parkersburg, W. Va., who was arrested by County Game Protector Clarence Franc[illegible] Thursday afternoon on the farm of Frank Boling, five miles west of Circleville.

He paid a fine of $50 and $6.20 in costs in Root's court.

MARION ROSE, 36, of Athens Route 5, was fined $15 and $6.20 on a charge of hunting a pheasant after 5 p. m. Thursday. He was arrested by Francis, on the Robert Baird farm, Circleville Route 1.

Two hunters were fined $10 and $7.30 in costs each for hunting without written permission, also on the Baird farm. They were arrested on an affidavit signed by Baird.

They are Harry Redman, 19, of 347 Logan street, and Charles Smith, 26, of 371 Logan street. They were ordered to county jail by Magistrate Root, but upon payment of fines and costs were released.

Five other hunters, four from Washington County, and one from Morgan County were fined $10 and $5.80 in costs each for hunting without permission on the Clarence Baker farm, west of Circleville on Route 56.

Pleading guilty to accusations were Kenneth K. Reed, 28; Raymond Keller, 29; William Strauss, 33, and Silas Woodruff, 34, all of Vincent, Washington County; and Paul Strauss, 32, of Stockport, Morgan County.

They were arrested Thursday by Francis and Constable Harry Timmons.

Friday morning Asa Barthelmas, 59, of 525 North Court street, was fined $15 and costs by Magistrate Root on a charge of hunting a pheasant before 9 a. m. Friday. He was arrested on the Bell farm, north of Circleville, by I. H. (Buck) Weaver, District 5 Game Protector-at-large, of Chillicothe, and Mark Epple, Adams County Game Protector.

750,000 WORK OHIO FIELDS

Only 1 Hunting Accident Mars Season Opener Here

Only one hunting accident was reported in Pickaway County Thursday as hundreds of nimrods swarmed through local fields in search of rabbits and pheasants on opening day.

Jack Carpenter, 24, of Columbus, formerly of Circleville, suffered shotgun pellet wounds at about noon Thursday when a gun carried by one of his hunting companions accidentally discharged.

Carpenter was wounded by shotgun pellets in the back, head and arms as he took the blast of his friend's gun.

Carpenter reported he had been hunting in a party when his friend stumbled nearby. Carpenter said the gun carried by his friend struck the ground and discharged.

The hunter's wounds were not serious and he was released after the pellets were removed from him in Berger hospital by Dr. J. M. Hedges.

CARPENTER was one of a number of persons wounded Thursday as about 750,000 hunters took to Ohio's fields on opening day. No one was fatally injured.

Several persons died during the day in connection with the opening of the hunting season, however.

Ernest H. Vaughters, 66, of Stoney Run, near Portsmouth, collapsed from a heart attack while hunting near his home.

Fred Moody, 34, and Ray Phillips, 47, of Friendship, Scioto County, were found dead in their car parked along a Pike County road. They apparently were poisoned by carbon monoxide as they waited in the warm auto for the formal opening of the season.

Ira Switzer, 82, of Melrose in Paulding County, succumbed to a heart attack while gunning for pheasants near his home. Alvin J. Hammon, of near Florida in Defiance County, died of the same cause.

O. M. Garland, 56, of Stow, a former Akron policeman, fell dead while hunting on a farm near Medina.

James Harmon, 64, collapsed and died while hunting on a farm near Toledo.

Luck kept a lot of hunters alive as shotgun and rifle wounds missed vital organs.

Thomas Cox, 17, of Columbus, was shot with a .22 caliber bullet as he handed the rifle to a companion. He is in fairly good condition in a Columbus hospital.

Ex-Cowboy Fights 'Demon Rum'

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 — An ex-cowboy, who said he "hit the sawdust trail and gave up the jug" two years ago, vowed today he will fight "Demon Rum" in every big city of America as the presidential candidate of the Prohibition Party.

Stuart Hamblen, who is six-feet-two and 214 pounds, received the news of his nomination in Indianapolis at his New York hotel suite. He said:

"All I want to do is get the kids off the streets on Saturday nights and into the churches on Sunday mornings. I don't really want to be President; my chances are slim."

'Common Enemy' Said Facing Both U.S., Russia

TOLEDO, Nov. 16—Defense Mobilizer Wilson urged the U. S. and Russia today to unite in a war against their "common enemy"—"a compound of fear and frustration, want and privation."

In an implied plea for disarmament, Wilson told the Toledo Chamber of Commerce that he offered his plan "as a way of avoiding the immeasurable tragedy of a third world war."

World War II, he said, brought victory without peace, but, he added, "the fight against this other common enemy would bring us both victory and peace." He continued:

"Moreover, this would be a war not of three or four or five years but perhaps three or four or five decades."

Discussing homefront defense plans, Wilson advised businessmen to use more initiative and rely less on government assistance. He declared:

"It is rather strange that some of the very people who complain most loudly about government interference are the same ones who are leaning too heavily upon the government for help that they can furnish themselves.

"Some of those who are shouting about controls are not acting with speed and vigor in areas where there are no controls, and where there is nothing to prevent them from going ahead in the traditional American way."

Polk Expected To Run Again

Congressman James G. Polk (D-Sixth Ohio District) announced at his home in Highland County Thursday that he "probably" will be a candidate for election next year in the new Sixth District.

He is the first to announce for Congress in the new district, which was enlarged by the last Ohio General Assembly by the addition of Pickaway, Ross and Fayette Counties to Highland, Pike, Scioto, Adams, Brown and Clermont Counties.

AUSTERITY PLAN REVEALED

Tough Consumer Goods Cutback Ordered By NPA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 — The government appeared today to have ordered the final—and the toughest—cutback in the nations production of refrigerators, washing machines and other consumer goods.

National Production Authority officials took the action by issuing a new industrial austerity plan covering civilian output during the first six months of 1952.

The order generally calls for another eight percent cut in steel supplies to consumer durable goods producers while aluminum and copper deliveries are reduced still further to meet military needs.

Besides cutting output of all types of civilian goods, officials said the order also would result in changes in the appearance of many products to save metal supplies.

* * *

NPA WARNED its plans would increase unemployment and business failures but it emphasized that every manufacturer would be given a "fighting chance for survival" next year.

In other developments, NPA:

1. Announced it is planning to reduce tin allocations to the tinplate industry 23 to 36 percent starting Jan. 1 as a result of the suspension of tin shipments from Bolivia. The action brought strong protests from tin plate manufacturers. Officials said it means corresponding reductions in the output of tin cans.

2. Reported the auto industry is running into difficulties on the supply of plate steel for bumpers, axles and wheels. Unless the picture improves, NPA said vehicle production may be reduced below authorized levels.

To provide equitable distribution of materials, NPA divided the durable goods industries into two groups and promised to aid any manufacturer faced with the possibility of closing his plant for lack of materials.

The first group, considered most essential, was given the highest allocations of scarce steel, copper and aluminum. It comprises manufacturers of 48 products including:

* * *

REFRIGERATORS, washing machines, home appliances, radios and television sets, stoves, cutlery, lawn mowers, cooking utensils, wooden furniture, mops, cabinets, office supplies and other items.

Producers of 32 other less essential products were listed in the second group. They make venetian blinds, metal furniture, mirror frames, organs, toys and games, umbrellas, jewelry and other articles.

All producers will receive an average 50 percent of their pre-Korean steel supply, but copper and aluminum deliveries are cut to 35 percent for producers in the first group and ten and 20 percent, respectively, for manufacturers in the second category.

Lausche Saves Teen-Ager From Execution In Chair

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16—Governor Lausche today commuted the death sentence of teen-ager Jerry Killinger a scant dozen hours after Killinger's companion in crime died in the electric chair.

Killinger, who will be 19 tomorrow, had been scheduled to die in the electric chair tonight for his part in the slaying of Medina County Farmer Harold Mast.

Max Amerman, 27, who planned the slaying so that he might continue a romance with Mast's Norwegian war bride, Randi, was executed last night with a prayer of repentance on his lips.

Killinger, when informed he would live, cried "Thank God" and fell to his knees in prayer before Warden Ralph W. Alvis and the Rev. Ray Hausted, Seventh Day Adventist minister who yesterday baptized the two killers.

* * *

LAUSCHE, in commuting Killinger's sentence to life imprisonment although he allowed Amerman to die, took note of Killinger's youth at the time of the slaying and of the influence the plotter Amerman had over him. the governor stated:

"Gerald was 17 years of age at the time the life of Harold Mast was taken. He was a mere boy and an employe of Mr. Amerman, whom he hero-worshipped. The plan to take the life of Harold Mast was evolved and initiated by Mr. Amerman.

"The parents of Harold Mast spontaneously and with a lofty concept of mercy and forgiveness, pleaded with me to commute the sentence of Gerald Killinger.

"Randi Mast, on the other hand, urged that I allow both Max Amerman and Gerald Killinger to be put to death.

"It would have been more consistent with required penitence on her part if she had remained silent."

Commie Jets Show Up, But Refuse Fight

KOREA, Nov. 16 — Communist jet planes emerged from their Manchurian hideouts and streaked over Northwest Korea today but avoided combat with patrolling American jets.

American pilots said they spotted 116 Soviet-type Mig-15 jets in the murky Korean skies, but were unable to get the Red fliers to fight.

Wintry cold and soup-thick fog restricted ground as well as air action.

Allied and Communist troops sat out one of the quietest days of the conflict Thursday as the 135-mile-long cold front rolled down from the hills of Manchuria.

There was one brief flurry of fighting on the rocky high ground west of Heartbreak Ridge in the east-central sector.

There United Nations infantrymen stormed a mountainside at dawn Thursday. They recaptured a position they had lost the previous night to two platoons of attacking Reds.

Storm Center Entering Ohio, To Bring Snow

A cold rain and some snow fell in Ohio Friday as a storm center from the southwest brought lower temperatures into the state.

The northwest section of the state recorded nearly an inch of snow in some spots and another inch is expected by Saturday morning.

The forecaster said other sections of Ohio had a cold rain which mixed with snow flurries as the mercury dropped. He said a light snow is expected generally Friday night.

He said temperatures would drop to between 25 and 30 by night. The temperatures will be somewhat lower Saturday and Sunday.

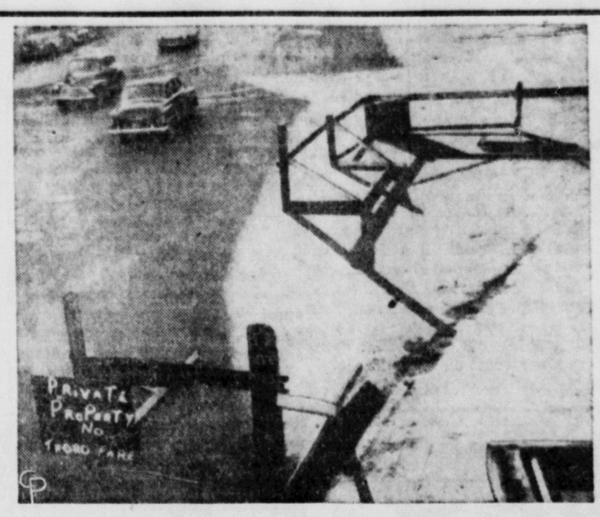

Following is the weather bureau's five-day forecast:

"Temperatures will average seven to ten degrees below normal with cold weather expected throughout the period, snow flurries Friday night and Saturday and some snow about Tuesday."

Railroads Given New Mail Hike

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 — The Interstate Commerce Commission today awarded the nation's railroads a 32 percent increase in rates for carrying mail.

The ICC said the new rates will net the railroads an additional $74,889,000 a year. A 48 percent increase was awarded in 1950 after the railroads complained that there had been no change in rates for more than 20 years.

CLAIMING HE OWNS part of Ninth street in downtown St. Louis, Joseph J. Schultz erects a street blockade. Schultz says he purchased the land from a railroad and wants to lease it to a filling station. When the railroad abandoned its tracks in 1910, the city widened the intersection to speed the flow of traffic. Schultz says he pays taxes on his section of the street.

UN TO ISSUE STATEMENT

Ridgway Aide Checking Up On Report Of Massacre

TOKYO, Nov. 16—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway's public information officer flew today to Korea and conferred with an American officer who charged that the Reds had murdered nearly 13,000 Allied prisoners of war.

The author of the allegation, Col. James M. Hanley, said that 5,000 to 6,000 captured Americans were among those massacred by the Communists since the war began.

Hanley, a judge advocate officer for the Eighth Army in charge of war crimes investigations, reiterated his previous estimate of nearly 13,000 United Nations prisoners slaughtered by the North Korean and Chinese Reds.

He denied that he had enlarged this total since he made his first controversial statement Wednesday.

Ridgway, the United Nations supreme commander, sent his public information officer, Col. George P. Welch, flying from Tokyo to the South Korean provisional capital of Pusan.

* * *

IMMEDIATELY upon his arrival at Pusan, Welch went into conference with Hanley, presumably questioning the latter on the sources of the information on which he based his statement.

Hanley's charges, first uttered at a Pusan news conference Wednesday, threatened to become the center of a stormy controversy involving high-level UN military policy.

A spokesman at Ridgway's Tokyo headquarters said Hanley was not authorized to issue the statement and said the colonel's figures may be exaggerated.

There were indications no clarifying announcement would be issued by UN supreme headquarters until Welch returns to Tokyo. A spokesman said:

"There will be no comment from this headquarters until the facts are officially established."

It is expected that headquarters will scale down Hanley's atrocity figures. A clarifying statement had been scheduled for Friday morning, but this was postponed pending outcome of Welch's first-hand investigation.

Hanley insisted that the figure of nearly 13,000 UN war prisoners killed by the Reds was correct.

* * *

HE SAID THIS total was based on information fully confirmed in material gathered from various sources including escaped Allied war prisoners, Korean civilians and even Communists captured by the Allies.

Hanley said an estimated 3,000 American prisoners were butchered by the North Korean Communists before Nov. 1, 1950. Then, the Chinese Reds alone murdered 2,513 American prisoners after they entered the Korean conflict, Hanley declared.

Tokyo observers pointed out that unless Hanley's estimates stand up under investigation the Communists would have an effective propaganda weapon which they would not hesitate to use.

However, the UN high command claims Hanley's charges were made without the prior knowledge of Ridgway or his headquarters staff.

Whatever the UN command will say after Welch gets back from Pusan will presumably cut down Hanley's estimates and detail only the confirmed, well-documented Red atrocity slayings known to have taken place.

UN, Communist Aides, Wrangle, Show No Progress

MUNSAN, Nov. 16 — United Nations and Communist armistice negotiators wrangled for another five hours at Panmunjom today, but failed to make any headway toward agreeing on a cease-fire in Korea.

Still deadlocked over the question of when to fix an armistice line, the joint four-man subcommittee adjourned for the day at 5 p. m. The negotiators agreed on only one thing—to reconvene at 11 o'clock Saturday morning (9 p. m. Friday EST).

Friday's session—the 29th meeting between the two UN and two Red delegates on the subcommittee—was marked by an Allied apology for an inadvertent aerial violation of the small Panmunjom neutral zone.

The incident occurred last Saturday when a UN fighter plane flew over the zone "due to a technical error."

The Allies are insisting that no "de facto" cease-fire can be agreed upon until all other issues relating to an armistice are settled.

The Reds demand the conclusive fixing of a cease-fire line before the delegates go on to discuss the other questions.

OSU To Dedicate Newest Building

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16—Ohio State university will end one of the greatest building programs in the university's history tomorrow with dedication of the new $4 million Ohio Union.

Since 'early 1948, a dozen new buildings and major additions to four others have been completed the university. Ohio State President Howard L. Bevis will preside over the dedication cermonies.

Australian Aide Tangles With Red

Soviet Given 2nd Trip To Rostrum

PARIS, Nov. 16—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky again rejected the Western disarmament plan today following an angry exchange with Australian Delegate Richard Casey.

Vishinsky protested in the UN General Assembly against what he termed the "shameless police methods" of Casey who challenged the Russian's right to address the assembly a second time to repeat "old stuff" arguments against the West.

Brig. Gen. Carlos Romulo of the Philippines earlier pointed his finger at Vishinsky and said Russia could give the word to halt the armaments race by agreeing to the Western peace plan.

"Let the Kremlin give such proof to the world," said Romulo, "and this awful weight would be lifted from nations, this mad race toward disaster halted."

Egyptian Foreign Minister Salah El Din Pasha meanwhile charged Britain with waging "a real war" against Egypt and accused the British of "shameful, treacherous aggression."

* * *

VISHINSKY TOOK the rostrum amid thunderous applause from a French "Communist claque" in the hall—and was immediately challenged by Casey.

Casey said "if he has new material to offer I will listen; otherwise I reserve the right to a second appearance myself."

Applause from Wesern delegates supported Casey who asked why Vishinsky was privileged to make two speeches to the single appearance of other delegates.

Vishinsky folded his arms as Casey appealed to Assembly President Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico.

Nervo ruled that Vishinsky had put his name down for a second appearance before the list closed. He gave Vishinsky the floor.

The Russian then began his speech by attacking Casey.

"I never imagined," he said, "that a delegate of a large or small power should be placed in such a shameful situation. We are accustomed to shamelessness, police methods, and third degree, but I will not lend myself to such proceedings.

"Consequently I think it would be humiliating for the assembly to say nothing of this personal humiliation from the Australians."

* * *

VISHINSKY HAD asked for a second appearance after British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden earlier this week calmly asked the Russian for a truce in name-calling. Eden and others also asked Vishinsky to quit "laughing" at the Western proposal and to study it closely.

Romulo termed the Western plan to disarm, including atomic weapons, a reasonable one. He said the Russian plan was based on the assumption that all powers, including the Soviet Union, would keep their pledged word without verification safeguards against rearmament.

"This," he said of the Russian plan, "is to build on quicksand. A sense of realism compels us to suggest a method of working gradually towards mutual confidence. . .to erect a sound and durable structure or world peace.

"This is a challenge to the Soviet Union to cooperate in working out a common program for peace."

The Egyptian foreign minister, Salah El Din Pasha, took the Anglo-Egyptian treaty dispute to the UN Assembly floor in a speech "daring" Britain to agree to a plebiscite among people of the jointly-ruled Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Authoritative London informants believe Britain will consider such a plebiscite. They stressed that the matter often has been discussed, but Egypt never forwarded specific proposals. Britain demands self-determination for the Sudanese.

Egypt's abrogation of two treaties with Britain providing for the joint rule of the Sudan and for the stationing of a limited number of British troops in the Suez Canal Zone has touched off clashes and demonstrations.

Old Almanac's Prediction Bodes Ill For Snow Shovel

DUBLIN, N.H., Nov. 16—A "stormy" Winter is predicted by Abe Weatherwise in the 160th edition of the Old Farmer's Almanac.

Mr. Weatherwise is the leader in the long-range forecast field. He even tops the United States Weather Bureau by three points on the average.

Abe figures December will be cold and windy with snow flurries the first half of the month turning to rain and snow with chilly northwest winds over the holiday period.

The prophet thinks little of next January's weather. He says the last week will be "fine and cold." Otherwise January will be snowy or dull with thaws possible.

Mr. Weatherwise will have support from his fellow weather expert, the groundhog. Both predict Winter will be only half over Feb. 2 when the woodchuck will see his shadow and go back to sleep for another six weeks.

February will be stormy until the 10th, according to the almanac's ace, and then will have a week of "real cold" which will end with a "real" blizzard.

March will wind up the rather miserable Winter by being "unsettled" over the first ten days and then move on into a cloudy, dull period.

It will be rainy and snowy (probably slushy) about income tax time before cold air moves in to clear things up in time for a mild end of the month.

Bricker Raps Big U.S. Payroll

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16—Ohio Sen. John W. Bricker declared here yesterday that there are more federal employes in Columbus than state and city workers.

Bricker told the Sertoma and Exchange Clubs that unless Congress starts "cutting the cost of government were going to destroy the economy of the United States" and open the door to control by a "complete leftwing party."

The senator said the President and the federal government have too much power for the good of the people and pointed to the destruction of the Hitler and Mussolini governments for this reason.

In other developments, NPA:

1. Announced it is planning to reduce tin allocations to the tinplate industry 23 to 36 percent starting Jan. 1 as a result of the suspension of tin shipments from Bolivia. The action brought strong protests from tin plate manufacturers. Officials said it means corresponding reductions in the output of tin cans.

2. Reported the auto industry is running into difficulties on the supply of plate steel for bumpers, axles and wheels. Unless the picture improves, NPA said vehicle production may be reduced below authorized levels.

To provide equitable distribution of materials, NPA divided the durable goods industries into two groups and promised to aid any manufacturer faced with the possibility of closing his plant for lack of materials.

The first group, considered most essential, was given the highest allocations of scarce steel, copper and aluminum. It comprises manufacturers of 48 products including:

* * *

REFRIGERATORS, washing machines, home appliances, radios and television sets, stoves, cutlery, lawn mowers, cooking utensils, wooden furniture, mops, cabinets, office supplies and other items.

Producers of 32 other less essential products were listed in the second group. They make venetian blinds, metal furniture, mirror frames, organs, toys and games, umbrellas, jewelry and other articles.

All producers will receive an average 50 percent of their pre-Korean steel supply, but copper and aluminum deliveries are cut to 35 percent for producers in the first group and ten and 20 percent, respectively, for manufacturers in the second category.

Lausche Saves Teen-Ager From Execution In Chair

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16—Governor Lausche today commuted the death sentence of teen-ager Jerry Killinger a scant dozen hours after Killinger's companion in crime died in the electric chair.

Killinger, who will be 19 tomorrow, had been scheduled to die in the electric chair tonight for his part in the slaying of Medina County Farmer Harold Mast.

Max Amerman, 27, who planned the slaying so that he might continue a romance with Mast's Norwegian war bride, Randi, was executed last night with a prayer of repentance on his lips.

Killinger, when informed he would live, cried "Thank God" and fell to his knees in prayer before Warden Ralph W. Alvis and the Rev. Ray Hausted, Seventh Day Adventist minister who yesterday baptized the two killers.

* * *

LAUSCHE, in commuting Killinger's sentence to life imprisonment although he allowed Amerman to die, took note of Killinger's youth at the time of the slaying and of the influence the plotter Amerman had over him. the governor stated:

"Gerald was 17 years of age at the time the life of Harold Mast was taken. He was a mere boy and an employe of Mr. Amerman, whom he hero-worshipped. The plan to take the life of Harold Mast was evolved and initiated by Mr. Amerman.

"The parents of Harold Mast spontaneously and with a lofty concept of mercy and forgiveness, pleaded with me to commute the sentence of Gerald Killinger.

"Randi Mast, on the other hand, urged that I allow both Max Amerman and Gerald Killinger to be put to death.

"It would have been more consistent with required penitence on her part if she had remained silent."

Storm Center Entering Ohio, To Bring Snow

A cold rain and some snow fell in Ohio Friday as a storm center from the southwest brought lower temperatures into the state.

The northwest section of the state recorded nearly an inch of snow in some spots and another inch is expected by Saturday morning.

The forecaster said other sections of Ohio had a cold rain which mixed with snow flurries as the mercury dropped. He said a light snow is expected generally Friday night.

He said temperatures would drop to between 25 and 30 by night. The temperatures will be somewhat lower Saturday and Sunday.

Following is the weather bureau's five-day forecast:

"Temperatures will average seven to ten degrees below normal with cold weather expected throughout the period, snow flurries Friday night and Saturday and some snow about Tuesday."

Commie Jets Show Up, But Refuse Fight

KOREA, Nov. 16 — Communist jet planes emerged from their Manchurian hideouts and streaked over Northwest Korea today but avoided combat with patrolling American jets.

American pilots said they spotted 116 Soviet-type Mig-15 jets in the murky Korean skies, but were unable to get the Red fliers to fight.

Wintry cold and soup-thick fog restricted ground as well as air action.

Allied and Communist troops sat out one of the quietest days of the conflict Thursday as the 135-mile-long cold front rolled down from the hills of Manchuria.

There was one brief flurry of fighting on the rocky high ground west of Heartbreak Ridge in the east-central sector.

There United Nations infantrymen stormed a mountainside at dawn Thursday. They recaptured a position they had lost the previous night to two platoons of attacking Reds.

Railroads Given New Mail Hike

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 — The Interstate Commerce Commission today awarded the nation's railroads a 32 percent increase in rates for carrying mail.

The ICC said the new rates will net the railroads an additional $74,889,000 a year. A 48 percent increase was awarded in 1950 after the railroads complained that there had been no change in rates for more than 20 years.

CLAIMING HE OWNS part of Ninth street in downtown St. Louis, Joseph J. Schultz erects a street blockade. Schultz says he purchased the land from a railroad and wants to lease it to a filling station. When the railroad abandoned its tracks in 1910, the city widened the intersection to speed the flow of traffic. Schultz says he pays taxes on his section of the street.

UN TO ISSUE STATEMENT

Ridgway Aide Checking Up On Report Of Massacre

TOKYO, Nov. 16—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway's public information officer flew today to Korea and conferred with an American officer who charged that the Reds had murdered nearly 13,000 Allied prisoners of war.

The auther of the allegation, Col. James M. Hanley, said that 5,000 to 6,000 captured Americans were among those massacred by the Communists since the war began.

Hanley, a judge advocate officer for the Eighth Army in charge of war crimes investigations, reiterated his previous estimate of nearly 13,000 United Nations prisoners slaughtered by the North Korean and Chinese Reds.

He denied that he had enlarged this total since he made his first controversial statement Wednesday.

Ridgway, the United Nations supreme commander, sent his public information officer, Col. George P. Welch, flying from Tokyo to the South Korean provisional capital of Pusan.

* * *

IMMEDIATELY upon his arrival at Pusan, Welch went into conference with Hanley, presumably questioning the latter on the sources of the information on which he based his statement.

Hanley's charges, first uttered at a Pusan news conference Wednesday, threatened to become the center of a stormy controversy involving high-level UN military policy.

A spokesman at Ridgway's Tokyo headquarters said Hanley was not authorized to issue the statement and said the colonel's figures may be exaggerated.

There were indications no clarifying announcement would be issued by UN supreme headquarters until Welch returns to Tokyo. A spokesman said:

"There will be no comment from this headquarters until the facts are officially established."

It is expected that headquarters will scale down Hanley's atrocity figures. A clarifying statement had been scheduled for Friday morning, but this was postponed pending outcome of Welch's first-hand investigation.

Hanley insisted that the figure of nearly 13,000 UN war prisoners killed by the Reds was correct.

* * *

HE SAID THIS total was based on information fully confirmed in material gathered from various sources including escaped Allied war prisoners, Korean civilians and even Communists captured by the Allies.

Hanley said an estimated 3,000 American prisoners were butchered by the North Korean Communists before Nov. 1, 1950. Then, the Chinese Reds alone murdered 2,513 American prisoners after they entered the Korean conflict, Hanley declared.

Tokyo observers pointed out that unless Hanley's estimates stand up under investigation the Communists would have an effective propaganda weapon which they would not hesitate to use.

However, the UN high command claims Hanley's charges were made without the prior knowledge of Ridgway or his headquarters staff.

Whatever the UN command will say after Welch gets back from Pusan will presumably cut down Hanley's estimates and detail only the confirmed, well - documented Red atrocity slayings known to have taken place.

Bricker Raps Big U.S. Payroll

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16—Ohio Sen. John W. Bricker declared here yesterday that there are more federal employes in Columbus than state and city workers.

Bricker told the Sertoma and Exchange Clubs that unless Congress starts "cutting the cost of government were going to destroy the economy of the United States" and open the door to control by a "complete leftwing party."

The senator said the President and the federal government have too much power for the good of the people and pointed to the destruction of the Hitler and Mussolini governments for this reason.

Australian Aide Tangles With Red

Soviet Given 2nd Trip To Rostrum

PARIS, Nov. 16—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky again rejected the Western disarmament plan today following an angry exchange with Australian Delegate Richard Casey.

Vishinsky protested in the UN General Assembly against what he termed the "shameless police methods" of Casey who challenged the Russian's right to address the assembly a second time to repeat "old stuff" arguments against the West.

Brig. Gen. Carlos Romulo of the Philippines earlier pointed his finger at Vishinsky and said Russia could give the word to halt the armaments race by agreeing to the Western peace plan.

"Let the Kremlin give such proof to the world," said Romulo, "and this awful weight would be lifted from nations, this mad race toward disaster halted."

Egyptian Foreign Minister Salah El Din Pasha meanwhile charged Britain with waging "a real war" against Egypt and accused the British of "shameful, treacherous aggression."

* * *

VISHINSKY TOOK the rostrum amid thunderous applause from a French "Communist claque" in the hall—and was immediately challenged by Casey.

Casey said "if he has new material to offer I will listen; otherwise I reserve the right to a second appearance myself."

Applause from Wesern delegates supported Casey who asked why Vishinsky was privileged to make two speeches to the single appearance of other delegates.

Vishinsky folded his arms as Casey appealed to Assembly President Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico.

Nervo ruled that Vishinsky had put his name down for a second appearance before the list closed. He gave Vishinsky the floor.

The Russian then began his speech by attacking Casey.

"I never imagined," he said, "that a delegate of a large or small power should be placed in such a shameful situation. We are accustomed to shamelessness, police methods, and third degree, but I will not lend myself to such proceedings.

"Consequently I think it would be humiliating for the assembly to say nothing of this personal humiliation from the Australians."

* * *

VISHINSKY HAD asked for a second appearance after British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden earlier this week calmly asked the Russian for a truce in name-calling. Eden and others also asked Vishinsky to quit "laughing" at the Western proposal and to study it closely.

Romulo termed the Western plan to disarm, including atomic weapons, a reasonable one. He said the Russian plan was based on the assumption that all powers, including the Soviet Union, would keep their pledged word without verification safeguards against rearmament.

"This," he said of the Russian plan, "is to build on quicksand. A sense of realism compels us to suggest a method of working gradually towards mutual confidence. . .to erect a sound and durable structure or world peace.

"This is a challenge to the Soviet Union to cooperate in working out a common program for peace."

The Egyptian foreign minister, Salah El Din Pasha, took the Anglo-Egyptian treaty dispute to the UN Assembly floor in a speech "daring" Britain to agree to a plebiscite among people of the jointly-ruled Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Authoritative London informants believe Britain will consider such a plebiscite. They stressed that the matter often has been discussed, but Egypt never forwarded specific proposals. Britain demands self-determination for the Sudanese.

Egypt's abrogation of two treaties with Britain providing for the joint rule of the Sudan and for the stationing of a limited number of British troops in the Suez Canal Zone has touched off clashes and demonstrations.

UN, Communist Aides, Wrangle, Show No Progress

MUNSAN, Nov. 16 — United Nations and Communist armistice negotiators wrangled for another five hours at Panmunjom today, but failed to make any headway toward agreeing on a cease-fire in Korea.

Still deadlocked over the question of when to fix an armistice line, the joint four-man subcommittee adjourned for the day at 5 p. m. The negotiators agreed on only one thing—to reconvene at 11 o'clock Saturday morning (9 p. m. Friday EST).

Friday's session—the 29th meeting between the two UN and two Red delegates on the subcommittee—was marked by an Allied apology for an inadvertent aerial violation of the small Panmunjom neutral zone.

The incident occurred last Saturday when a UN fighter plane flew over the zone "due to a technical error."

The Allies are insisting that no "de facto" cease-fire can be agreed upon until all other issues relating to an armistice are settled.

The Reds demand the conclusive fixing of a cease-fire line before the delegates go on to discuss the other questions.

OSU To Dedicate Newest Building

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16—Ohio State university will end one of the greatest building programs in the university's history tomorrow with dedication of the new $4 million Ohio Union.

Since early 1948, a dozen new buildings and major additions to four others have been completed the university. Ohio State President Howard L. Bevis will preside over the dedication cermonies.

Only 1 Hunting Accident Mars Season Opener Here

Two Lancaster brothers, Robert, 16, and Donald Lutz, 18, were shot by a companion while hunting near Lancaster.

The Akron area furnished two casualties. A 27-year-old nurse, Mrs. Jane D. Baker, was struck in the throat by pellets as she bent over to pick up a rabbit.

Curtis Cummings, 22, of Lakemore, was shot in the left leg by a member of his own hunting party.

A bulldozer operator, Hugh Davis, 31, was wounded by shotgun pellets while working south of Barberton.

Robert Meyer, 30, seriously injured his hand when he stumbled and his gun discharged near Toledo.

An exploding gun barrel injured William Rison, 25, and his companion, Arthur Jackson, 25, both of Sylvania.

Hunting Season Opener Reveals Skimpy 'Take'

From all indications, the 1951 hunting season in Pickaway County is leaning toward the "poor" side.

A number of persons taking to the fields in the county on opening day Thursday came back with their limits of both rabbits and pheasants.

Others, however, just came back.

Notwithstanding the various excuses offered by the hunters—lack of game, poor cover or faulty ammunition—actual figures show that the take here Thursday was less than bountiful.

Spot checks by game protectors in the county Thursday showed that hunters were not in danger of being arrested for hogishness.

A total of 171 hunters were checked throughout the day by Game Protectors Clarence Francis, Ray Hughes, Buck Weaver and Mark Epple. Of the 171 persons checked, a total of only 189 pieces of game were found in their possession.

Francis and Hughes checked 96 hunters during the day, finding only 33 pheasants and 66 rabbits in their possession.

Weaver and Epple checked 75 hunters and found only 28 with pheasants, 62 with rabbits.

This means that only about one hunter out of every three who were checked had bagged a pheasant; and, on the statistical average, each hunter checked could brag only of about two-thirds of a rabbit apiece. Which makes lean fare on the table.

Kingston Man Loses Driving Rights For Year

Robert Davis, 35, of Kingston Route 1, has had his driving rights suspnded for one year by Pickaway County common pleas court for drunken driving.

In addition to losing his driving privilges, the man also was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail. The jail sentence was suspended.

Davis was brought before the court on an accusation of drunken driving filed in early November. However, at that time he was on $500 bond from the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller for a similar offense, which happened earlier.

Court officials said that the first accusation against him is still on file. Davis was brought before Judge William D. Radcliff in common pleas court on an affidavit filed by Prosecutor Guy Cline.

Involved in the crash in this Southern Georgia town was the New York-to-Miami Havana Special. Six cars of the streamliner left the rails and some of them plowed into the Hortense station crushing the wooden structure.

pellets as he worked as a brick mason in Hamilton County.

Two Lancaster brothers, Robert, 16, and Donald Lutz, 18, were shot by a companion while hunting near Lancaster.

The Akron area furnished two casualties. A 27-year-old nurse, Mrs. Jane D. Baker, was struck in the throat by pellets as she bent over to pick up a rabbit.

Curtis Cummings, 22, of Lakemore, was shot in the left leg by a member of his own hunting party.

A bulldozer operator, Hugh Davis, 31, was wounded by shotgun pellets while working south of Barberton.

Robert Meyer, 30, seriously injured his hand when he stumbled and his gun discharged near Toledo.

An exploding gun barrel injured William Rison, 25, and his companion, Arthur Jackson, 25, both of Sylvania.

Hunting Season Opener Reveals Skimpy 'Take'

From all indications, the 1951 hunting season in Pickaway County is leaning toward the "poor" side.

A number of persons taking to the fields in the county on opening day Thursday came back with their limits of both rabbits and pheasants.

Others, however, just came back.

Notwithstanding the various excuses offered by the hunters—lack of game, poor cover or faulty ammunition—actual figures show that the take here Thursday was less than bountiful.

Spot checks by game protectors in the county Thursday showed that hunters were not in danger of being arrested for hogishness.

A total of 171 hunters were checked throughout the day by Game Protectors Clarence Francis, Ray Hughes, Buck Weaver and Mark Epple. Of the 171 persons checked, a total of only 189 pieces of game were found in their possession.

Francis and Hughes checked 96 hunters during the day, finding only 33 pheasants and 66 rabbits in their possession.

Weaver and Epple checked 75 hunters and found only 28 with pheasants, 62 with rabbits.

This means that only about one hunter out of every three who were checked had bagged a pheasant; and, on the statistical average, each hunter checked could brag only of about two-thirds of a rabbit apiece. Which makes lean fare on the table.

Laws for the New Nation

JEHOVAH PROCLAIMS RULES TO GUIDE ISRAELITES

Scripture—Exodus 18-23.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

CONSIDERING the lawlessness of today's troubled world, it is good to give this period of our time to the re-reading of the laws which Jehovah gave to His people whom He had delivered from oppression in Egypt. Especially is it timely to emphasize the Ten Commandments, which are as applicable to our time as they were to the Israelites who were on their way to a life of freedom in the land the Lord had promised them.

In the beginning of today's Bible reference, we are told that Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, heard in Midian the success of Moses' efforts to free his people, and he was pleased. According to the account, Moses had sent his wife, Zipporah, and their two sons back to Midian to live with Zipporah's father while he and Aaron were persuading Pharaoh to permit the Israelites to leave Egypt.

Now that the march toward Canaan had begun, Jethro brought Zipporah and her children to rejoin Moses. The two men met and greeted each other warmly, and the family was reunited. Moses told Jethro all that had happened and Jethro rejoiced.

As far as this writer can discover, Moses' wife's name is not mentioned again in the Bible narrative.

In the days following the arrival of Jethro, he saw that Moses was giving too much of his time to settling the personal affairs of the people. Jethro proceeded to give Moses some advice. He insisted that the thing Moses was doing was not good. He had been sitting from morning until night listening to the people's questions and disputes.

"Provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth..." he said, "and place such over them to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens: and let them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge, so that they bear the burden with thee."

This sage advice Moses followed, relieving himself of his too heavy burdens.

In the third month after the children of Israel were gone out of the land of Egypt, they came to the land (or wilderness) of Sinai. Moses went up onto the mount, and God talked to him out of the mountain, telling him what he should say to the children of Israel.

Jehovah reminded Moses of His deliverance of the people from Egypt. "Now therefore, if ye will obey My voice indeed, and keep My covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto Me above all people: for all the earth is Mine.

"And ye shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel."

Moses came down from the mount and called the elders of the people together, and "laid before their faces all these words which the Lord commanded him."

"And all the people answered together, and said, All that the Lord hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the Lord."

The Lord said unto Moses, "Lo, I come unto thee in a thick cloud, that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and believe thee forever." This too Moses told the people. Then the Lord told Moses to have the people sanctify themselves and prepare to meet the Lord.

The people made ready, and on the morning of the third day "there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet was exceeding loud; so that all the people that were in the camp trembled."

The people were kept from coming too near the mount, and were cautioned not to touch any part of it or they would surely die.

Then Jehovah gave Moses what we call the Ten Commandments, which should be remembered always and kept religiously. Briefly they are:

"Thou shall have no other gods but me.

Thou shalt not make any graven image and bow down to worship it.

"Thou shalt not take the name of thy God in vain."

"Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy... for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day.

"Honor thy father and thy mother.

"Thou shalt not kill.

"Thou shalt not commit adultery.

"Thou shalt not steal.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness.

"Thou shalt not covet."

All the people saw the lightnings on the mount and heard the thunderings and the sound of the trumpet, and they saw the smoke on the mountain, and they were terrified, so much so that they begged Moses to speak to them and reassure them. "But let not God speak with us," they said, "lest we die."

Moses answered: "Fear not: for God is come to prove you, and that His fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not."

Many more laws Jehovah gave His people which by obeying they would please Him. Alas, how soon this chosen people disobeyed God's laws, bringing disaster on themselves!

One commandment that God gave His people is particularly appropriate to our time. It concerned strangers in their land. Many "strangers" are coming to our own country after fleeing from their native land because of Communist domination. God said:

"Thou shalt not vex a stranger, nor oppress him; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt."

Laws for the New Nation

JEHOVAH PROCLAIMS RULES TO GUIDE ISRAELITES

Scripture—Exodus 18-23.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

CONSIDERING the lawlessness of today's troubled world, it is good to give this period of our time to the re-reading of the laws which Jehovah gave to His people whom He had delivered from oppression in Egypt. Especially is it timely to emphasize the Ten Commandments, which are as applicable to our time as they were to the Israelites who were on their way to a life of freedom in the land the Lord had promised them.

In the beginning of today's Bible reference, we are told that Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, heard in Midian the success of Moses' efforts to free his people, and he was pleased. According to the account, Moses had sent his wife, Zipporah, and their two sons back to Midian to live with Zipporah's father while he and Aaron were persuading Pharaoh to permit the Israelites to leave Egypt.

Now that the march toward Canaan had begun, Jethro brought Zipporah and her children to rejoin Moses. The two men met and greeted each other warmly, and the family was reunited. Moses told Jethro all that had happened and Jethro rejoiced.

As far as this writer can discover, Moses' wife's name is not mentioned again in the Bible narrative.

In the days following the arrival of Jethro, he saw that Moses was giving too much of his time to settling the personal affairs of the people. Jethro proceeded to give Moses some advice. He insisted that the thing Moses was doing was not good. He had been sitting from morning until night listening to the people's questions and disputes.

"Provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth..." he said, "and place such over them to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens: and let them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge, so that they bear the burden with thee."

This sage advice Moses followed, relieving himself of his too heavy burdens.

In the third month after the children of Israel were gone out of the land of Egypt, they came to the land (or wilderness) of Sinai. Moses went up onto the mount, and God talked to him out of the mountain, telling him what he should say to the children of Israel.

Jehovah reminded Moses of His deliverance of the people from Egypt. "Now therefore, if ye will obey My voice indeed, and keep My covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto Me above all people: for all the earth is Mine.

"And ye shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel."

Moses came down from the mount and called the elders of the people together, and "laid before their faces all these words which the Lord commanded him."

"And all the people answered together, and said, All that the Lord hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the Lord."

The Lord said unto Moses, "Lo, I come unto thee in a thick cloud, that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and believe thee forever." This too Moses told the people. Then the Lord told Moses to have the people sanctify themselves and prepare to meet the Lord.

The people made ready, and on the morning of the third day "there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet was exceeding loud; so that all the people that were in the camp trembled."

The people were kept from coming too near the mount, and were cautioned not to touch any part of it or they would surely die.

Then Jehovah gave Moses what we call the Ten Commandments, which should be remembered always and kept religiously. Briefly they are:

"Thou shall have no other gods but me.

Thou shalt not make any graven image and bow down to worship it.

"Thou shalt not take the name of thy God in vain."

"Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy... for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day.

"Honor thy father and thy mother.

"Thou shalt not kill.

"Thou shalt not commit adultery.

"Thou shalt not steal.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness.

"Thou shalt not covet."

All the people saw the lightnings on the mount and heard the thunderings and the sound of the trumpet, and they saw the smoke on the mountain, and they were terrified, so much so that they begged Moses to speak to them and reassure them. "But let not God speak with us," they said, "lest we die."

Moses answered: "Fear not: for God is come to prove you, and that His fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not."

Many more laws Jehovah gave His people which by obeying they would please Him. Alas, how soon this chosen people disobeyed God's laws, bringing disaster on themselves!

One commandment that God gave His people is particularly appropriate to our time. It concerned strangers in their land. Many "strangers" are coming to our own country after fleeing from their native land because of Communist domination. God said:

"Thou shalt not vex a stranger, nor oppress him; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt."

A NATION REMEMBERS

IF THE American people have a single characteristic which is universal it is open-heartedness. They never fail to respond to any human need.

Under auspices of the American Legion they have raised a trust fund of more than $100,000 for Robert L. Smith of Middleburg, Pa., the first quadruple amputee of the Korean war. Robert is just 21 years old, and enters his majority without arms and legs. A Philadelphia bank will administer the fund without cost, under the direction of a commission headed by Governor Fine of Pennsylvania.

Robert will be permitted to use a part of the fund to purchase a home, go into business if he so desires, and will receive all the income, payable quarterly. Now unmarried, the money goes to his mother in case of his death, or to his family in case he marries. There are many other provisions, all designed to make the unfortunate young man secure for the remainder of his life.

This is typical of the American spirit of understanding and generosity. It could be said, of course, that Robert would prefer his limbs to any amount of money. But since he has lost them it is fitting that the nation for which he made the sacrifice has not forgotten.

SPECIAL WEEKS OUT

MAYOR Sexton of Leavenworth, Kan., announces he will issue no more proclamations in behalf of "official weeks," following instructions from city council.

Tag days and other promotions in behalf of this, that and what have you will be on their own in the future so far as Leavenworth is concerned. Action by council followed announcement by the Leavenworth Daily Times that it will not give support to special weeks in its columns from now on.

Many of the causes supported by tag days and special weeks are worthy, but the fact remains that such promotions have become a public nuisance. The nation observes more special weeks than there are weeks in the regular calendar.

A large majority are strictly commercial in character and advertising pure and simple. Their "messages" belong in the advertising columns of the newspapers, paid for at regular advertising rates, instead of in the news columns. The public is bored by these shenanigans and pays little attention to them.

Leavenworth has set a precedent which other cities should follow.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

In a way, I was astonished by the grandeur and beauty of "The Hermitage," The Democrats had so ardently painted Andrew Jackson as a common man, by which, in our English language, we can only mean a vulgar, boorish, cheap person. But no common man could have built and furnished, much less lived in such a house as "The Hermitage." Nor would a vulgarian have loved the gardens and the magnificent trees of this place.

Obviously, Jackson was an uncommon man or he could not have had such a career as his, nor could an ordinary peasant have penned the glorious lines, worthy perhaps of a Robert Browning, which the hero of New Orleans placed upon the grave of his wife, Rachel:

"Here lie the remains of Mrs. Rachel Jackson, wife of President Jackson, who died the 22nd of December, 1828. Age, 61 years. Her face was fair, her person pleasing, her temper amiable, her heart kind; she was delighted in relieving the wants of her fellow creatures, and cultivated that divine pleasure by the most liberal and unpretending methods; to the poor she was a benefactor; to the rich an example; to the wretched a comforter; to the prosperous an ornament; her piety went hand in hand with her benevolence, and she thanked her creator for being permitted to do good. A being so gentle and so virtuous slander might wound, but could not dishonor. Even death, when he bore her from the arms of her husband, could but transport her to the bosom of her God."

He had arranged for only these words on his own gravestone:

General Andrew Jackson
Born March 15, 1767
Died June 8, 1845

There is, in a sense, a proud, even an arrogant simplicity in the one word, "General." He omits all honors including the presidency and uses only the highest rank of his profession.

Over the years I have read considerably on Andrew Jackson, but it was not until last week, when visiting Nashville, Tenn., that I pursued my favorite habit of making pilgrimages to historic sites.

In such buildings, if one is sensitive to floors and ceilings and furniture, somehow the atmosphere of other days recreates itself. I could almost hear Jackson speaking in adoring whispers to his Rachel and confiding his secret yearnings to his servant, Uncle Alfred, whose remains are buried in the garden close to the general.

No common man was Andrew Jackson, lawyer, real estate speculator, horse fancier and racer. Show me the kind of home a man builds for himself and I know the man.

"The Hermitage" clearly bespeaks the joy of living. It has a happy, contented tone and while its furnishings are not of the taste or quality of the Salem houses built by the millionaires who were making their fortunes in the China trade, it does tell the story of a man who enjoyed a broad and gay life, who ate and drank joyously and loved flowers and horses and music. Jackson played the banjo, flute and violin, and Rachel the piano, and I should imagine they sang together.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

DR. BUTCHER stopped, puffing, to glare at Peter, after his accusation that the young resident had failed to diagnose appendicitis. Some of the Staff men looked embarrassed. The director frowned in bewilderment.

"What have you to say about that, young man?" asked Dr. Butcher.

"Why," Peter answered, with admirable calm, "I think your claim that I failed to diagnose the case properly is mistaken, sir. If you're talking about Mayer, I must remind you that he was operated upon and successfully so."

"But what about your diagnosis? I know he was operated on—after a dangerous delay—but did you diagnose appendicitis?"

"And that he had malaria," said Peter. Two or three of the Staff men whispered a word or so to each other.

It was evidently the first time Butcher had heard of the malaria, but the manager prevented his speaking further by reminding him that the Mayer case was not under consideration.

"You let him instruct me," said Butcher sullkily, "while you might be looking at his own records."

"The point I'm making, doctor, is that the issue you raise is between Dr. Shepherd and the hospital. It is no real concern of an outsider."

Butcher blinked at this word.

"But since you did bring it up," the manager continued blandly, "I have one question I will ask on the subject." He glanced at Peter, then at Butcher again. "I'd like to know how you got your information on the Mayer case, Dr. Butcher. So far as I know, our files are not open to you, have not been."

"There's no mystery about it," said Butcher. "The situation rather shocked one of your surgical residents. . . ."

"Which surgical resident?" Now he looked at Shepherd. "Do you know, doctor?"

Peter's lips were white. "It had to be Dr. Poli, sir. He was on the same duty."

"It certainly was Poli," said Butcher. "A good man! A promising young doctor. I hope this hospital takes advantage of his skill." And then, as if aware of the reservation with which his praise was met, he added, "You don't have to take my word on that, either. Since you're so fond of records, I'm sure Poli's record will show his excellence."

"I expect it would," agreed Dr. Stoetzal. "But you still haven't explained to my satisfaction why Poli came to you about another doctor's diagnosis. I don't understand the circumstance, Dr. Butcher. If the case was any of Dr. Poli's affair—"

"You just heard the intern say they were on the same duty."

"Stop calling Dr. Shepherd an intern!" Dr. Stoetzal fairly roared this order.

"I'm sorry. It's a little hard to realize that a doctor of any experience— Well, since we have it established that Dr. Poli had a right to know of the case, it doesn't seem too much out of line that he should ask my advice as to what he should do about what he considered a wrong diagnosis."

"Were there no Staff doctors available?"

"Maybe he realized what a white-haired boy Shepherd is around here." Venom glistened like beads of fat upon his tone. A couple of the doctors laughed; a couple murmured in angry protest.

The manager lifted his hand. "And what advice did you give Dr. Poli?"

"Why, I told him to wait, if he safely could. It would be the ethical thing. Of course, the patient was the first consideration, but I pointed out that any action on his part could get Shepherd into trouble—I wonder now at my generosity. Look where it's got me!"

"Please?" said one of the Staff doctors, and the O.D. nodded to him. "I was going to ask if Dr. Poli didn't fail in his duty? Shouldn't he have made a report if he thought a patient was in danger?"

"He should have and he would have," said Peter unexpectedly. "I believe this whole story of Dr. Butcher's is—what's the word—apocryphal, I mean, Poli told him about it after it had all happened. Poli's out gunning for me, and—"

"You don't have the floor, Shepherd!" said the O.D. quickly.

"Sorry," said Peter, taking his chair.

"Dr. Stoetzal?"

The manager glanced up. "Just a minute—" He needed to think. The situation had him somewhat in despair. Poli obviously was out to get Shepherd, and Butcher was, too. Therefore their charges must be panned for any worth within them. Peter's zeal had undoubtedly saved the hospital some embarrassment and possibly disaster in the Yearby case. Also, he had opened the door through which the Group could rid itself of Butcher.

But, just as truly, this brash young doctor needed his sharp edges filed down. One could not let him go on feeling that he had set the hospital aright; such an attitude would be unendurable! And the rasping had better start right now. He looked coldly down the room to Peter, spoke coldly to him.

"If you will please get the file on Mayer, Dr. Shepherd, and bring it to my office, I think I could study it at my leisure and save some time here. As I said before, the Mayer case has no place on this agenda."

"Unless you're just generally interested in whether this young man can make an early diagnosis of evident appendicitis."

"We are interested, Dr. Butcher."

"Are you going to ask him, if he did not make that early diagnosis, why didn't he?"

Peter glanced at him sharply. Now what?

"I'm going to look at the record," said Dr. Stoetzal, angry again. "I am inclined to decide that the record is the final evidence in this case of yours, and in the one you have brought up against Dr. Shepherd."

My record will show up clean, Peter told himself.

"You may go now, Shepherd," said Stoetzal. "Put the Mayer file in my office, and return to your duty."

Peter whistled softly as he went down to the records room, signed in, and approached the proper filing cabinet. This late in the afternoon the file clerks were gone. Except for the student at the desk, the place was deserted. Peter rolled the drawer out, fingered the folders—there it was. Joseph Mayer. He took the folder out, clanged the drawer, started toward the door—and stopped dead. His eyes bulged, his heart thudded.

But this couldn't be! It couldn't! He was so sure the whole thing was down in black and white . . . And it was! Oh, it definitely was! His lips moved with the words written on the big sheet, in the small, clear handwriting which his training had disciplined him to use, so that the histories would be instantly legible, the record plain. On this page, the history was done in the intern's hand, but the diagnosis was written by Peter, signed by him. Symptoms, blood count, temperature, pulse and "The fact of malaria must be of first consideration." But not one letter of the word appendicitis!

The recommendation was for surgery if necessary, for relief without surgery if possible, but what good was that? It was the diagnosis which was the crucial thing, the diagnosis which he had made, but—he'd told Mayer! He knew he had. . . . And he would have sworn on a stack of Bibles that he'd written it down.

He had to take this folder to the manager's office. He shivered. Was he ever in a spot! The speech he'd made up in Staff meeting, putting himself on record as requiring a full and meticulous history, an exact diagnosis—oh, brother! Why couldn't he keep his big mouth shut?

Poli and Butcher both knew that his diagnosis was not on this paper—and it should have been. He could have sworn it was! Had someone erased it? He held the sheet up to the light—there was no fuzz on the smoothness of the paper. Besides, there wasn't place for an erasure. "The fact of malaria . . ." Of all the disgusting situations!

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Too bad we have come to associate Thanksgiving with a full stomach instead of a full heart.

But those who won't have turkey for Thanksgiving this year are reminded that not all the Pilgrims had white meat either.

And if they could give thanks, with an Indian behind every tree, for the little they had, we should be able to muster up a little gratitude, with a tax collector behind every item, for all we have.

My barber says he will settle for veal scalloppini and anybody who asks for the drumstick will be referred to the nearest music store.

But no matter what we have, let us acknowledge that we are comparatively better off than most people. . .with or without chestnut dressing.

As the old lady said when the heating pad seared her chemise: "Still it's better than chilling my chilblains."

A NATION REMEMBERS

IF THE American people have a single characteristic which is universal it is openheartedness. They never fail to respond to any human need.

Under auspices of the American Legion they have raised a trust fund of more than $100,000 for Robert L. Smith of Middleburg, Pa., the first quadruple amputee of the Korean war. Robert is just 21 years old, and enters his majority without arms and legs. A Philadelphia bank will administer the fund without cost, under the direction of a commission headed by Governor Fine of Pennsylvania.

Robert will be permitted to use a part of the fund to purchase a home, go into business if he so desires, and will receive all the income, payable quarterly. Now unmarried, the money goes to his mother in case of his death, or to his family in case he marries. There are many other provisions, all designed to make the unfortunate young man secure for the remainder of his life.

This is typical of the American spirit of understanding and generosity. It could be said, of course, that Robert would prefer his limbs to any amount of money. But since he has lost them it is fitting that the nation for which he made the sacrifice has not forgotten.

SPECIAL WEEKS OUT

MAYOR Sexton of Leavenworth, Kan., announces he will issue no more proclamations in behalf of "official weeks," following instructions from city council.

Tag days and other promotions in behalf of this, that and what have you will be on their own in the future so far as Leavenworth is concerned. Action by council followed announcement by the Leavenworth Daily Times that it will not give support to special weeks in its columns from now on.

Many of the causes supported by tag days and special weeks are worthy, but the fact remains that such promotions have become a public nuisance. The nation observes more special weeks than there are weeks in the regular calendar.

A large majority are strictly commercial in character and advertising pure and simple. Their "messages" belong in the advertising columns of the newspapers, paid for at regular advertising rates, instead of in the news columns. The public is bored by these shenanigans and pays little attention to them.

Leavenworth has set a precedent which other cities should follow.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

In a way, I was astonished by the grandeur and beauty of "The Hermitage," The Democrats had so ardently painted Andrew Jackson as a common man, by which, in our English language, we can only mean a vulgar, boorish, cheap person. But no common man could have built and furnished, much less lived in such a house as "The Hermitage." Nor would a vulgarian have loved the gardens and the magnificent trees of this place.

Obviously, Jackson was an uncommon man or he could not have had such a career as his, nor could an ordinary peasant have penned the glorious lines, worthy perhaps of a Robert Browning, which the hero of New Orleans placed upon the grave of his wife, Rachel:

"Here lie the remains of Mrs. Rachel Jackson, wife of President Jackson, who died the 22nd of December, 1828. Age, 61 years. Her face was fair, her person pleasing, her temper amiable, her heart kind; she was delighted in relieving the wants of her fellow creatures, and cultivated that divine pleasure by the most liberal and unpretending methods; to the poor she was a benefactor; to the rich an example; to the wretched a comforter; to the prosperous an ornament; her piety went hand in hand with her benevolence, and she thanked her creator for being permitted to do good. A being so gentle and so virtuous slander might wound, but could not dishonor. Even death, when he bore her from the arms of her husband, could but transport her to the bosom of her God."

He had arranged for only these words on his own gravestone:

General Andrew Jackson
Born March 15, 1767
Died June 8, 1845

There is, in a sense, a proud, even an arrogant simplicity in the one word, "General." He omits all honors including the presidency and uses only the highest rank of his profession.

Over the years I have read considerably on Andrew Jackson, but it was not until last week, when visiting Nashville, Tenn., that I pursued my favorite habit of making pilgrimages to historic sites.

In such buildings, if one is sensitive to floors and ceilings and furniture, somehow the atmosphere of other days recreates itself. I could almost hear Jackson speaking in adoring whispers to his Rachel and confiding his secret yearnings to his servant, Uncle Alfred, whose remains are buried in the garden close to the general.

No common man was Andrew Jackson, lawyer, real estate speculator, horse fancier and racer. Show me the kind of home a man builds for himself and I know the man.

"The Hermitage" clearly bespeaks the joy of living. It has a happy, contented tone and while its furnishings are not of the taste or quality of the Salem houses built by the millionaires who were making their fortunes in the China trade, it does tell the story of a man who enjoyed a broad and gay life, who ate and drank joyously and loved flowers and horses and music. Jackson played the banjo, flute and violin, and Rachel the piano, and I should imagine they sang together.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

DR. BUTCHER stopped, puffing, to glare at Peter, after his accusation that the young resident had failed to diagnose appendicitis. Some of the Staff men looked embarrassed. The director frowned in bewilderment.

"What have you to say about that, young man?" asked Dr. Butcher.

"Why," Peter answered, with admirable calm, "I think your claim that I failed to diagnose the case properly is mistaken, sir. If you're talking about Mayer, I must remind you that he was operated upon and successfully so."

"But what about your diagnosis? I know he was operated on—after a dangerous delay—but did you diagnose appendicitis?"

"And that he had malaria," said Peter. Two or three of the Staff men whispered a word or so to each other.

It was evidently the first time Butcher had heard of the malaria, but the manager prevented his speaking further by reminding him that the Mayer case was not under consideration.

"You let him instruct me," said Butcher sulkily, "while you might be looking at his own records."

"The point I'm making, doctor, is that the issue you raise is between Dr. Shepherd and the hospital. It is no real concern of an outsider."

Butcher blinked at this word.

"But since you did bring it up," the manager continued blandly, "I have one question I will ask on the subject." He glanced at Peter, then at Butcher again. "I'd like to know how you got your information on the Mayer case, Dr. Butcher. So far as I know, our files are not open to you, have not been."

"There's no mystery about it," said Butcher. "The situation rather shocked one of your surgical residents. . . ."

"Which surgical resident?" Now he looked at Shepherd. "Do you know, doctor?"

Peter's lips were white. "It had to be Dr. Poli, sir. He was on the same duty."

"It certainly was Poli," said Butcher. "A good man! A promising young doctor. I hope this hospital takes advantage of his skill." And then, as if aware of the reservation with which his praise was met, he added, "You don't have to take my word on that, either. Since you're so fond of records, I'm sure Poli's record will show his excellence."

"I expect it would," agreed Dr. Stoetzal. "But you still haven't explained to my satisfaction why Poli came to you about another doctor's diagnosis. I don't understand the circumstance, Dr. Butcher. If the case was any of Dr. Poli's affair—"

"You just heard the intern say they were on the same duty."

"Stop calling Dr. Shepherd an intern!" Dr. Stoetzal fairly roared this order.

"I'm sorry. It's a little hard to realize that a doctor of any experience— Well, since we have it established that Dr. Poli had a right to know of the case, it doesn't seem too much out of line that he should ask my advice as to what he should do about what he considered a wrong diagnosis."

"Were there no Staff doctors available?"

"Maybe he realized what a white-haired boy Shepherd is around here." Venom glistened like beads of fat upon his tone. A couple of the doctors laughed; a couple murmured in angry protest.

The manager lifted his hand. "And what advice did you give Dr. Poli?"

"Why, I told him to wait, if he safely could. It would be the ethical thing. Of course, the patient was the first consideration, but I pointed out that any action on his part could get Shepherd into trouble—I wonder now at my generosity. Look where it's got me!"

"Please?" said one of the Staff doctors, and the O.D. nodded to him. "I was going to ask if Dr. Poli didn't fail in his duty? Shouldn't he have made a report if he thought a patient was in danger?"

"He should have and he would have," said Peter unexpectedly. "I believe this whole story of Dr. Butcher's is—what's the word—apocryphal, I mean, Poli told him about it after it had all happened. Poli's out gunning for me, and—"

"You don't have the floor, Shepherd!" said the O.D. quickly.

"Sorry," said Peter, taking his chair.

"Dr. Stoetzal?"

The manager glanced up. "Just a minute—" He needed to think. The situation had him somewhat in despair. Poli obviously was out to get Shepherd, and Butcher was, too. Therefore their charges must be panned for any worth within them. Peter's zeal had undoubtedly saved the hospital some embarrassment and possibly disaster in the Yearby case. Also, he had opened the door through which the Group could rid itself of Butcher.

But, just as truly, this brash young doctor needed his sharp edges filed down. One could not let him go on feeling that he had set the hospital aright; such an attitude would be unendurable! And the rasping had better start right now. He looked coldly down the room to Peter, spoke coldly to him.

"If you will please get the file on Mayer, Dr. Shepherd, and bring it to my office, I think I could study it at my leisure and save some time here. As I said before, the Mayer case has no place on this agenda."

"Unless you're just generally interested in whether this young man can make an early diagnosis of evident appendicitis."

"We are interested, Dr. Butcher."

"Are you going to ask him, if he did not make that early diagnosis, why didn't he?"

Peter glanced at him sharply. Now what?

"I'm going to look at the record," said Dr. Stoetzal, angry again. "I am inclined to decide that the record is the final evidence in this case of yours, and in the one you have brought up against Dr. Shepherd."

My record will show up clean, Peter told himself.

"You may go now, Shepherd," said Stoetzal. "Put the Mayer file in my office, and return to your duty."

Peter whistled softly as he went down to the records room, signed in, and approached the proper filing cabinet. This late in the afternoon the file clerks were gone. Except for the student at the desk, the place was deserted. Peter rolled the drawer out, fingered the folders—there it was. Joseph Mayer. He took the folder out, clanged the drawer, started toward the door—and stopped dead. His eyes bulged, his heart thudded.

But this couldn't be! It couldn't! He was so sure the whole thing was down in black and white . . . And it was! Oh, it definitely was! His lips moved with the words written on the big sheet, in the small, clear handwriting which his training had disciplined him to use, so that the histories would be instantly legible, the record plain. On this page, the history was done in the intern's hand, but the diagnosis was written by Peter, signed by him. Symptoms, blood count, temperature, pulse and "The fact of malaria must be of first consideration." But not one letter of the word appendicitis!

The recommendation was for surgery if necessary, for relief without surgery if possible, but what good was that? It was the diagnosis which was the crucial thing, the diagnosis which he had made, but—he'd told Mayer! He knew he had. . . . And he would have sworn on a stack of Bibles that he'd written it down.

He had to take this folder to the manager's office. He shivered. Was he ever in a spot! The speech he'd made up in Staff meeting, putting himself on record as requiring a full and meticulous history, an exact diagnosis—oh, brother! Why couldn't he keep his big mouth shut?

Poli and Butcher both knew that his diagnosis was not on this paper—and it should have been. He could have sworn it was! Had someone erased it? He held the sheet up to the light—there was no fuzz on the smoothness of the paper. Besides, there wasn't place for an erasure. "The fact of malaria . . ." Of all the disgusting situations!

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

When I read letters about the shy child and timid youth whose parents or teachers misunderstand him, suppose he is disobedient, lazy or ill mannered, my heart sinks low in sympathy for his suffering. Often the parent writes of her embarrassment or humiliation over him, and wants to know by what punishment she can change him so she might escape her discomfiture.

Teachers rarely write about this child unless he's too timid to talk at all in the classroom.

Most teachers with adequate training or native insights know that the child who chews his hands or clothing, hangs his head in silence when asked to talk or barely can be heard, is suffering from self-consciousness.

Many a teacher is so patient with the timid child or youth as to help him gain in personal courage and, therefore, to act and speak conventionally. This teacher doesn't shout at the child who mumbles or hardly can be heard. She waits serenely as he speaks. If she can't hear him she walks closer to him, then gradually backs away.

* * *

SHE ALSO TRIES to create a classroom atmosphere so friendly that he has no fear of being laughed at or interrupted by anyone there. Everybody in her classroom is a precious person. Year by year she more often may be found in our schools. Let us pray for more like her.

But while the timid child or youth may try the patience of the teacher, she is not haunted by the disapproval of her friends. Yet when a tot with his mother is accosted on the street or in a store by a friend of this mother, she may feel very much embarrassed if he hangs his head, chews his hands, or hides behind her skirts in silence; or if this little child on receiving a gift from an adult stranger were too shy to say "Thank you," or to accept it.

Even if the youngster, two to five, should offer his left hand in shaking a stranger's hand, the mother is pretty sure to shout at him, "No, the other hand." She should be glad he had the courage to offer the hand he did.

Suppose the child six, ten or fifteen, is engaged in conversation by an adult guest. How fearful his parent may feel lest he might not say the right thing or speak in the right way—lest he might embarrass her. She reveals her anxiety by the ways she sits or gyrates her bodyparts, or breathes or looks. She may feel warm flashes creeping over her face. And when she can stand it no longer, she butts in and speaks for him or diverts the conversation. The father may be as bad, or worse.

Sensing the parent's anxiety, how can the child feel at east, think and express himself effectively? "What if I should say something or do something I shouldn't?" overshadows his thoughts and feelings.

Blessed is the child whose parents feel so comfortable when he meets and tries to speak to strangers, that they are entirely at ease. Then his fear subsides, his courage grows. Test yourself next time you have the opportunity.

Answering Parents' Questions

Q. Why does so much of a parent's good advice and exhortation to the child over eight or ten go unheeded?

A. Because they usually are jawed at him. To make our advice acceptable to our children, we must be emotionally persuasive (attractive) and the child emotionally receptive when we give it.

Q. Why are narcotics in the form of drugs even more dangerous than alcohol to our youths?

A. They are sold under cover. Their use is so secretive. They are so rapidly habit-forming and enslave the addict so very soon, and so rapidly break down his moral stamina, personality and efficiency.

Q. What is a good way for a child of the third, fourth or fifth grade, who is a poor reader, to become a better reader?

A. By his reading to a preschool child for pleasure. The satisfaction to the reader and listener is great, and the older child has practice on the very kind of reading matter he can read well. It's fun with a purpose.

Jaycees Hold 'Bosses' Banquet Review Accomplishments In Year

Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce took inventory of past accomplishments Thursday night and was told that for a 20-man organization it had done well.

But, it was added, the organization has a potential membership of about 450, meaning that in direct ratio the local Jaycees could be near world-beaters.

The appraisal came in the Mecca restaurant as the group of young businessmen in the 21-35 age bracket staged its annual "Bosses Night Banquet."

Principal speaker was Paul Moore of Geneva, president of the Ohio Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Each of the local Jaycees was accompanied by either his boss or a special guest.

* * *

IN HIS ADDRESS, Moore traced the work of an imaginary young man named Jack.

Jack was born and raised in Circleville, went to college a couple of years and served three or four years in the Army. Returning to his hometown, Jack married, had a family, built a home in one of the newer subdivisions.

His new home fronted an unpaved and unlighted street. He approached his councilman on the problems, was advised the city had no funds for street paving or lighting.

However, Jack could have the street oiled for $50 and a light put up for a similar figure. Jack lacked such funds.

It was then he realized the necessity of community action and the street and lighting jobs were accomplished — but only after it became a community project.

Jack became interested in Jaycee work, joined the organization. He was named chairman of a committee, but put off holding a committee meeting until he had to admit before fellow Jaycees that he had failed.

He headed a second committee, became ambitious. In his ambition he envisioned a project which had statewide and nationwide appeal. But the project flopped because he was unable to apply it to his own hometown.

* * *

A THIRD committee chairmanship was given to Jack. This time, he planned carefully with fellow committee members and success was reached.

Moore's points were obvious.

In tracing the local Jaycee accomplishments, Robert Brehmer Jr. listed some as follows:

Sponsorship of backing of the Hoover Report, Cracker Barrel Caravan, Crusade for Freedom, Get-out-the-Vote, Pickaway County midway direction, Junior golf programs, three Pumpkin Show projects and support given such election issues as school bond matters.

The guests at the meeting—the "bosses" of the Jaycees—nodded that for a 20-man group, these projects were more than worth the effort.

And the open question was—how long would the list have been had the local Jaycee membership been up to its potential of 450 men?

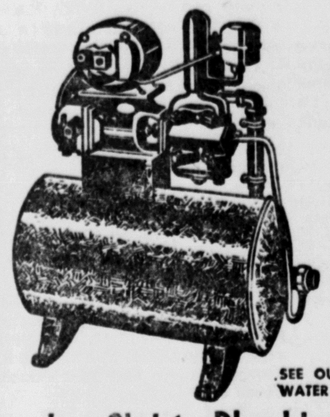

The dinner meeting was directed by Henry Reid Jr., toastmaster, and Roger May, local Jaycee president.

Plan Proposed To Label Culprits

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 — A New Jersey official proposes that motorists convicted of reckless driving be made conspicuous by placing a red sticker on their windshield.

Commissioner Warren N. Gaffney of the department of banking and insurance told a regional highway safety conference that the sticker plan would provide a new approach in the "grim battle" against automobile deaths.

A. They are sold under cover. Their use is so secretive. They are so rapidly habit-forming and enslave the addict so very soon, and so rapidly break down his moral stamina, personality and efficiency.

Q. What is a good way for a child of the third, fourth or fifth grade, who is a poor reader, to become a better reader?

A. By his reading to a preschool child for pleasure. The satisfaction to the reader and listener is great, and the older child has practice on the very kind of reading matter he can read well. It's fun with a purpose.

Jaycees Hold 'Bosses' Banquet Review Accomplishments In Year

Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce took inventory of past accomplishments Thursday night and was told that for a 20-man organization it had done well.

But, it was added, the organization has a potential membership of about 450, meaning that in direct ratio the local Jaycees could be near world-beaters.

The appraisal came in the Mecca restaurant as the group of young businessmen in the 21-35 age bracket staged its annual "Bosses Night Banquet."

Principal speaker was Paul Moore of Geneva, president of the Ohio Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Each of the local Jaycees was accompanied by either his boss or a special guest.

* * *

IN HIS ADDRESS, Moore traced the work of an imaginary young man named Jack.

Jack was born and raised in Circleville, went to college a couple of years and served three or four years in the Army. Returning to his hometown, Jack married, had a family, built a home in one of the newer subdivisions.

His new home fronted an unpaved and unlighted street. He approached his councilman on the problems, was advised the city had no funds for street paving or lighting.

However, Jack could have the street oiled for $50 and a light put up for a similar figure. Jack lacked such funds.

It was then he realized the necessity of community action and the street and lighting jobs were accomplished — but only after it became a community project.

Jack became interested in Jaycee work, joined the organization. He was named chairman of a committee, but put off holding a committee meeting until he had to admit before fellow Jaycees that he had failed.

He headed a second committee, became ambitious. In his ambition he envisioned a project which had statewide and nationwide appeal. But the project flopped because he was unable to apply it to his own hometown.

* * *

A THIRD committee chairmanship was given to Jack. This time, he planned carefully with fellow committee members and success was reached.

Moore's points were obvious.

In tracing the local Jaycee accomplishments, Robert Brehmer Jr. listed some as follows:

Sponsorship of backing of the Hoover Report, Cracker Barrel Caravan, Crusade for Freedom, Get-out-the-Vote, Pickaway County midway direction, Junior golf programs, three Pumpkin Show projects and support given such election issues as school bond matters.

The guests at the meeting—the "bosses" of the Jaycees—nodded that for a 20-man group, these projects were more than worth the effort.

And the open question was—how long would the list have been had the local Jaycee membership been up to its potential of 450 men?

The dinner meeting was directed by Henry Reid Jr., toastmaster, and Roger May, local Jaycee president.

Plan Proposed To Label Culprits

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 — A New Jersey official proposes that motorists convicted of reckless driving be made conspicuous by placing a red sticker on their windshield.

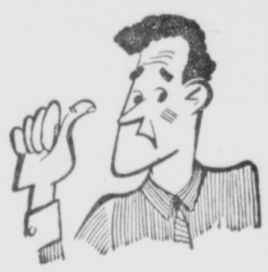

Commissioner Warren N. Gaffney of the department of banking and insurance told a regional highway safety conference that the sticker plan would provide a new approach in the "grim battle" against automobile deaths.

Largest exhibitor in the show is Ohio State university, with 70 entries. Iowa State college is next with 65 entries. Largest individual exhibitor is Penney and James, from Hamilton, Missouri, who will be showing 25 purebred Aberden-Angus cattle.

Scioto County Probing Deaths Of Two Hunters

PORTSMOUTH, Nov. 16 — State police today are investigating the deaths of two Scioto County men found in the front seat of a car parked on a filling station driveway 15 miles north of here.

Patrolmen said the two, who were identified as Fred Moody, 33, of Friendship, and Raymond Phillips, 46, of Worley's Run, may have died of carbon monoxide poisoning although the motor of the car was not running at the time they were discovered.

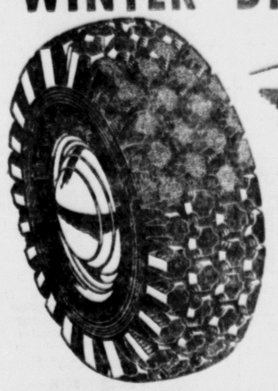

Officers said the victims apparently planned a hunting trip since a rifle was found in the rear seat of the car and were waiting for the 9 a. m. legal hour to start.

Moody was dead at the time of discovery yesterday morning and Phillips died in a Portsmouth hospital in the afternoon.

The first Elks club was founded in New York in 1866.

Illini Coach Not Overlooking Buckeye Threat

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16 — Illinois' unbeaten Rosebowl-bound football team flew into Columbus last night with some concern over whether it will be able to fly as successfully into Ohio State tomorrow at game time.

Before departing for a Columbus hotel, Illini Coach Ray Eliot worriedly summed up his team's eighth opponent saying:

"Our scouts have told us only one thing. Ohio State has a terrific all around team. Sure, they've had their troubles, but as far as we're concerned they'll throw a good running, steady passing and general defensive eleven at us Saturday."

Eliot, who said Illinois made the trip early to avoid possible forestalling weather, persisted that Ohio had no weaknesses and said he was concerned over the lack of depth on his own squad.

* * *

ELIOT WILL work his team out lightly today at 3 p. m., and Ohio State also has a practice session on tap.

Coach Woody Hayes' Buckeyes looked every bit like a team that was out to score an upset during rehearsals yesterday. The defense was served a full dose of the pass plays of Illinois Quarterback Tom O'Connell. Frank Edwards was the impersonator throwing from both the SMU spread and regular "T."

Demarco-Chavez Bout Due Friday

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 — A lightweight title shot may be in line for the winner of tonight's ten-rounder at Madison Square Garden between rough-'n-tough Paddy Demarco and Eddie Chavez of San Jose, Cal.

Demarco, who has won ten straight fights including a non-title decision from Featherweight Champion Sandy Saddler, is installed as a 2-1 favorite over the 20-year-old Californian.

Young Chavez has lost three times in 38 pro fights. He has also fought two draws.

Stands for Something that's Always in Style

THE eagle that perches so proudly on the globe represents a real bird, a regimental mascot. He survived many hard-fought battles, and afterward lived to a great age.

On Case machines the eagle means the same thing —ENDURANCE. It means stamina to stand up under a lot of punishment, to have extra years of useful life.

At our store the sign of the eagle means that we are in business to see that you get all the endurance and extra life built into Case tractors and machines. We use genuine factory parts and work to factory standards. See us now about your service needs.

Don't Be Caught Short

Check farm machinery now and schedule any needed repair work at once—be ready for next season.

Illini Coach Not Overlooking Buckeye Threat

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16 — Illinois' unbeaten Rosebowl-bound football team flew into Columbus last night with some concern over whether it will be able to fly as successfully into Ohio State tomorrow at game time.

Before departing for a Columbus hotel, Illini Coach Ray Eliot worriedly summed up his team's eighth opponent saying:

"Our scouts have told us only one thing. Ohio State has a terrific all around team. Sure, they've had their troubles, but as far as we're concerned they'll throw a good running, steady passing and general defensive eleven at us Saturday."

Eliot, who said Illinois made the trip early to avoid possible forestalling weather, persisted that Ohio had no weaknesses and said he was concerned over the lack of depth on his own squad.

* * *

ELIOT WILL work his team out lightly today at 3 p. m., and Ohio State also has a practice session on tap.

Coach Woody Hayes' Buckeyes looked every bit like a team that was out to score an upset during rehearsals yesterday. The defense was served a full dose of the pass plays of Illinois Quarterback Tom O'Connell. Frank Edwards was the impersonator throwing from both the SMU spread and regular "T."

Demarco-Chavez Bout Due Friday

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 — A lightweight title shot may be in line for the winner of tonight's ten-rounder at Madison Square Garden between rough-'n-tough Paddy Demarco and Eddie Chavez of San Jose, Cal.

Demarco, who has won ten straight fights including a non-title decision from Featherweight Champion Sandy Saddler, is installed as a 2-1 favorite over the 20-year-old Californian.

Young Chavez has lost three times in 38 pro fights. He has also fought two draws.

Stands for Something that's Always in Style

THE eagle that perches so proudly on the globe represents a real bird, a regimental mascot. He survived many hard-fought battles, and afterward lived to a great age.

On Case machines the eagle means the same thing —ENDURANCE. It means stamina to stand up under a lot of punishment, to have extra years of useful life.

At our store the sign of the eagle means that we are in business to see that you get all the endurance and extra life built into Case tractors and machines. We use genuine factory parts and work to factory standards. See us now about your service needs.

Browns Gridders In Good Shape For Giant Test

CLEVELAND, Nov. 16 — The Cleveland Browns wind-up their last workouts today before taking to the air on the trip to meet the New York Giants in the Polo Grounds Sunday.

Coach Paul Brown's gridders are in good physical shape for the tilt that is expected to decide the National Football League's American Conference title.

Not only are the Browns in top physical shape, but their mental attitudes are sharp. They know that they have to beat the Giants and they know that they have turned the trick twice in a row.

Brown has been tuning up the team's offense for the contest. The club's passing attack is as potent as ever with Otto Graham enjoying one of his hottest streaks.

* * *

THE CLEVELAND quarterback has been pitching the oval at a near 60 percent clip this season, and that includes some fancy passing against the Giants a few weeks ago. Graham's hurling accounted for a 14-13 victory over the New Yorkers.

In that game, the Browns solved the mystery of Coach Steve Owen's "umbrella" defense, but swirling winds in Cleveland's wind - swept stadium kept passing down to a minimum in the second half.

The Browns may stir up a wind of their own this time in New York and blow the Giants right out of the race.

Gil McDougald, Willie Mays Are 1951 Rookies Of Year Winners

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—Baseball's broken record—"you can't beat the Yankees"—blared on today with the announcement that Gil McDougald has been chosen rookie of the year in the American League along with Willie Mays of the champion Giants in the National.

McDougald got in by the grace of two votes over Orestes Minoso of the White Sox, while Amazin' Willie just strutted off with the freshman laurels in the balloting of a 24-man committee from the Baseball Writers' Association.

The 23-year-old second baseman-third baseman of the world champs got 13 votes to Minoso's 11. Mays polled 18 and his closest rival, Lefty Chet Nichols of the Braves, got 4. Righthander Clem Labine of the Dodgers received two votes.

McDougald's close call over Minoso outdid the battle for most valuable player honors in which Yogi Berra nosed out Ned Garver; and like the MVP selection, this one is bound to stir up some hot stove debates.

* * *

THE YOUTHFUL Yankee infielder, just up from the Texas League where he had been MVP, really had himself a sensational first season in the big time. He led the Yankees in batting with a .306 mark and sparked them with his adept handling of two positions in the inner defense.

Gil hit 14 homers and drove in 63 runs. But Minoso boosters also had strong arguments.

Minnie was one of the leading batsmen in the league with a .326 average.

The Cuban whiz led in stolen bases with 31 and in triples with 14, and was second in runs scored and doubles. He hit 10 homers and drove in 74 runs.

Minnie was fourth man in the MVP balloting while McDougald finished ninth.

With Berra and Roy Campanella of the Dodgers chosen as most valuable, the rookie awards gave New York clubs a monopoly on baseball honors for 1951.

Willie showed he was a speedy, fine fielding centerfielder with a terrific arm. But in his first 26 times at bat, the Fairfield, Ala., flash managed to get only one hit.

Mays found the major league range after that, however, and despite the fact that he went back into a batting daze in the last couple of weeks of the season, he wound up with a .274 average, hitting 20 homers and driving in 68 runs for the National League champs.

There is nothing primitive, nothing of the backwoodsman here. Long before Jackson went to New Orleans as a general or to Washington as President, he had established himself as a successful lawyer, a man of means and a considerable landowner.

It is perhaps not astonishing, therefore, that as President, he paid off the national debt. Men who love homes and build them as though they were temples generally fear debt.

I could not help wondering, as I passed from room to room in "The Hermitage,' what Jackson would have thought of a $258 billion debt for his country. I wonder what he would have thought of a tax system that makes it difficult for a man to save out of his earnings to buy his own land and build his own home for the woman he loves.

Fancy biograhers research these strong figures into vulgarians; they debunk personality into a democratic smallness; their yardstick is the cheapness of their own minds. But they never really know the man, for they cannot understand love of the soil.

Having sent a morning in "The Hermitage," I am sure Jackson is not the figure that the Democratic National Committee wants me to think he is; nor is Jefferson, the builder of "Monticello." These were heroic creatures of ability, means and character who lived by building.

GILLMAN PLANS AIR ATTACK

Queen City Is Awaiting Bearcat-Xavier Contest

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16 — Cincinnati's Bearcats, leading the nation's undefeated collegiate elevens, lay their nine-game winning streak on the line Saturday afternoon at Nippert Stadium in a crucial game matching in interest the Ohio State-Illinois fracas.

The Bearcats, boasting the best season in the school's history, meet unbeaten but once-tied Xavier university's Musketeers in the Queen City's grid classic of all time.

Advance ticket sales assure a capacity crowd of more than 30,000 highly partisan fans for this battle between Cincinnati's highly rated offense and Xavier's equally touted defense.

'Cat Coach Sid Gillman frankly stated this week that he plans an all-out aerial bombardment in deference to the Musketeer defense, which has limited eight opponents to a mere 40 points. Gillman summed it up with:

* * *

"NO ONE ELSE has run on 'em this year, so there's no reason why we should be able to do it."

Musketeer Coach Ed Kluska, on the other hand, has deep respect for the passing artistry of Gene Rossi and has been stressing pass defense all week. He's not taking any chances that Gillman will pull what he did last season—surprise Cincinnati with a passing attack that brought victory.

Kluska himself can throw a devastating passing barrage in addition to his established ground offensive.

In the air he can use George Gilmartin, who has a better than .500 average, while his running attack is sparked by versatile Bob Finnell.

This will be the eighth meeting between the schools since 1918 with the 'Cats having a 5-2 edge.

So far this season, the Bearcats have amassed 326 points in nine games to their opponents' 72, while the Musketeers have 247 to 40 in eight games.

* * *

TO INSURE a fast playing field, authorities have kept Nippert field covered all week and, if the weather holds fair, this should be one of the nation's top contests.

Elsewherein the state, Ohio Wesleyan's amazing Bishops will make their bid Saturday in a "dad's day" clash with Wittenberg for the mythical Ohio Conference championship and their eighth straight win against one loss.

Although highly favored, the Bishops remember last year when the fighting Lutherans held them to a 7-7 tie for their only smudge on a 16-game league winning streak. The Bishops lead the loop with five wins and Wittenberg has a 1-3 record.

In two other conference tilts, and also season finales, Wooster hosts its traditional rival from Oberlin in a "dad's day" game Saturday and Heidelberg tackles Akron Friday night in an effort to bow out with an 8-1-1 record.

Chief interest in this latter game will be the performance of All-Ohio Halfback Paul Yackey from Dover, who holds the conference scoring record with 20 touchdowns and leads in offense with 1,030 yards in 167 carries.

In a Mid-American topnoteher, Miami U. will continue its bid for the championship against an underdog Western Reserve Saturday at Oxford. Miami's lone opponent after this will be powerful Cincinnati, which also is in the top spot.

In other games, Ohio U. hosts Eastern Kentucky Saturday in a finale, which it hopes will wind up the season with a 6-3-0 record; Dayton ends its season Saturday against Marshall College at Huntington, W. Va., seeking win number seven in nine starts; and Kent State hosts its last opponent, New Hampshire U., Saturday with both elevens at full strength for the first time since their openers. Kent takes a 4-2-2 record into the fray.

Mount Union will also wind up the season at Youngstown against the Penguins tonight. Mount Union has a 3-4 season and the host team a 2-6.

Tiger Gridders To Be Guests

Two of the largest stars of the 1951 Circleville Tiger football team will grace the Ohio State university bench Saturday afternoon when the Bucks meet Illinois in Columbus.

They are 260-pound Tackle Bill Gillis, this year's "most valuable player" for Circleville; and 190-pound End-Fullback Dave Coffland. Both boys are considered possible Buckeye material.

Browns Gridders In Good Shape For Giant Test

CLEVELAND, Nov. 16 — The Cleveland Browns wind-up their last workouts today before taking to the air on the trip to meet the New York Giants in the Polo Grounds Sunday.

Coach Paul Brown's gridders are in good physical shape for the tilt that is expected to decide the National Football League's American Conference title.

Not only are the Browns in top physical shape, but their mental attitudes are sharp. They know that they have to beat the Giants and they know that they have turned the trick twice in a row.

Brown has been tuning up the team's offense for the contest. The club's passing attack is as potent as ever with Otto Graham enjoying one of his hottest streaks.

* * *

THE CLEVELAND quarterback has been pitching the oval at a near 60 percent clip this season, and that includes some fancy passing against the Giants a few weeks ago. Graham's hurling accounted for a 14-13 victory over the New Yorkers.

In that game, the Browns solved the mystery of Coach Steve Owen's "umbrella" defense, but swirling winds in Cleveland's wind - swept stadium kept passing down to a minimum in the second half.

The Browns may stir up a wind of their own this time in New York and blow the Giants right out of the race.

Gil McDougald, Willie Mays Are 1951 Rookies Of Year Winners

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—Baseball's broken record—"you can't beat the Yankees"—blared on today with the announcement that Gil McDougald has been chosen rookie of the year in the American League along with Willie Mays of the champion Giants in the National.

McDougald got in by the grace of two votes over Orestes Minoso of the White Sox, while Amazin' Willie just strutted off with the freshman laurels in the balloting of a 24-man committee from the Baseball Writers' Association.

The 23-year-old second baseman-third baseman of the world champs got 13 votes to Minoso's 11. Mays polled 18 and his closest rival, Lefty Chet Nichols of the Braves, got 4. Righthander Clem Labine of the Dodgers received two votes.

McDougald's close call over Minoso outdid the battle for most valuable player honors in which Yogi Berra nosed out Ned Garver; and like the MVP selection, this one is bound to stir up some hot stove debates.

* * *

THE YOUTHFUL Yankee infielder, just up from the Texas League where he had been MVP, really had himself a sensational first season i.. the big time. He led the Yankees in batting with a .306 mark and sparked them with his adept handling of two positions in the inner defense.

Gil hit 14 homers and drove in 63 runs. But Minoso boosters also had strong arguments.

Minnie was one of the leading batsmen in the league with a .326 average.

The Cuban whiz led in stolen bases with 31 and in triples with 14, and was second in runs scored and doubles. He hit 10 homers and drove in 74 runs.

Minnie was fourth man in the MVP balloting while McDougald finished ninth.

With Berra and Roy Campanella of the Dodgers chosen as most valuable, the rookie awards gave New York clubs a monopoly on baseball honors for 1951.

Neither Mays nor McDougald were listed on their team's rosters last spring. McDougald, fresh from Beaumont, impressed Casey Stengel in the training camp and stuck with the Bombers.

The 20-year-old Mays, with only a year of professional ball behind him, was called up late in May from the Giants' Minneapolis farm team. Mays found the major league range after that, however, and despite the fact that he went back into a batting daze in the last couple of weeks of the season, he wound up with a .274 average, hitting 20 homers and driving in 68 runs for the National League champs.

2 County Lads Seek National Honors

4-H Tests Face Rivers And Reid

Ronald Rivers

Kenneth Reid

Championships To Be Sought

Two Pickaway County youths will be battling for top national honors when they attend the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago Nov. 25-29.

They are Ronald Rivers, 18, the state health improvement program champion; and Kenneth Reid, 20, Ohio's number one leader in tractor maintenance.

Rivers, who lives in Pickaway County near Mt. Sterling, is considered to be one of the most outstanding 4-H workers in the health field.

That he would rank at the top of the pile in the coming national contest would come as no surprise to local persons who have observed his work.

* * *

UNTIRING EFFORTS to improve his own health and the health habits of family and community earned for Ronald this recognition.

Realizing the importance of a health program he has formed good eating habits and has an annual physical and dental examination.

Spurred on by his active interest in sanitation the Rivers family have purchased a milk cooler, had well water tested and carried out a thorough fly control program.

As a result the grade of milk was changed from "C" to "A."

Reid's ability to maintain and operate a tractor skillfully has netted his family a sizable saving in time, labor and money, and has also influenced others towards the proper use and care of mechanized equipment on the farm.

A club member for nine years, Kenneth has spent two years learning about farm machinery.

The 1,200 acres of farms which the Reids operate necessitates maintaining their seven tractors in good working condition to keep the farms in production.

Ken has served his club as president and vice-president, also as assistant leader since 1949.

General Says Air Status Could Become Serious

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 — Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg flew into Washington early today from an inspection tour of the Korean front and warned that the air situation there "could become serious."

The Air Force chief of staff reported that American planes in Korea now are holding their own and that "so far the situation is under control." Vandenberg said:

"It has been the duty of our planes to prevent enemy supplies from going in—and that's what they're doing."

Asked if he thought the North Koreans and the Red Chinese had better planes at the front than those flown by American airmen, Vandenberg replied:

"No, I don't think so."

At this point the Air Force general repeated that "the situation could become serious."

Vandenberg said that there was some fear among high military leaders in Korea that should the Korea truce talks eventually succeed, there would be a tremendous letdown in the U.S. defense effort.

"Even if the truce talks succeed," Vandenberg asserted, "the people of this country must remember that we will still have to keep our forces there for a long, long time."

Rhine River Defense Line Being Drawn

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—A new and enlarged plan to build 30 to 40 tactical bases along the Rhine river is reported under study today in the drive to give air support to Gen. Eisenhower's European army.

A previous plan for 12 to 14 bases has been found inadequate under Air Force Secretary Finletter's decision that the "bulk" of America's troop support wings eventually should be stationed in Europe.

The bases, to be built under the authority of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, will be located almost entirely in Northern France, with a few just across the border in Western Germany.

This is said to conform with opinion at Eisenhower's headquarters that the old Maginot-Siegfried line area still offers the best positions the Allies can hope to hold on the continent in case of invasion by numerically superior Soviet forces.

The enlarged plan for bases is expected to come up for discussion at a meeting of the NATO military committee and council beginning this weekend in Rome. Defense Secretary Lovett and Gen. Omar N. Bradley are en route to represent the U.S. at the meeting.

Lodge Lawsuit Is Ruled Out

AKRON, Nov. 16 — The ninth district court of appeals in Akron has ruled that Mrs. Nellie Damm cannot sue the Elyria Elks lodge for injuries received in a fall because her husband was a member of the club.

The court held that the $15,000 suit would in effect a suit against the husband and contrary to state law.

Cuyahoga Port To Be Built

CLEVELAND, Nov. 16 — Cuyahoga County's Richmond airport will get a hard-surfaced runway as the first move in the development of the suburban air field.

County commissioners said yesterday that they also planned to spend the remaining $300,000 from the airport bond issue to buy additional land for the Richmond project.

Commissioner John F. Curry said that "the county's airport will be available to the Air Force if the need exists, but we are determined to go ahead and develop the port in any case."
